

A FAMOUS RESORT

Not Only for Invalids But Those in Search of Amusement.

THE ATTRACTIONS AT MT. CLEMENS.

Some of the Most Superb Fishing Grounds in the World—The Virtues of the Waters and Baths so Far as Rheumatism are Concerned—Some Remarkable Cures are Instanced as to Their Efficacy.

Special Correspondence of the Intelligence.

Mr. CLEMENS, MICH., August 6.—It is not to be supposed that every sojourner at Mt. Clemens is an invalid come to bask in the sun, to drink the water, or what not. For Mt. Clemens, be it understood, is a very pleasant summer resort on Clinton river, so near to Lake St. Clair that the river is easily mistaken for a short arm of the lake. There is no end to the boating and fishing, riding and driving, for as many as incline to these diversions. It is a restful spot, and many come here to do nothing else than rest, and I must say that it is very very to fall in with this noble aspiration. To rest and add the baths. Almost everybody takes the hot salt sulphur baths, distinctly salt and superlatively sulphurous. It is my misfortune to find no delight in sulphur water as it impresses itself on the sense of smell, and so I can not join with those enthusiasts who "love the very odor of it," but we become accustomed to these things, as the cat said when she fell out of the tenth story window; and what was offensive yesterday is easier tolerated today. Yet by common consent the gas is stronger some times than at others, and then a clothes-pin on the nose would be grateful to those who do not "love the odor of it." When the water is running to fill the tubs the gas comes with a rush, and to protect the eyes the attendants wear a great goggles head-gear that looks like the head-light of a diver's outfit.

If one were gathering advertising material for Mt. Clemens it would be easy to find it without going off the hotel piazza. Here is a man who tells me that he was brought here "all doubled up" last summer, had to be wheeled about and was almost helpless. This evening he joins other convalescents and "graduates" in a Virginia reel. He comes because he feels drawn to the place and to make sure of holding fast to a good thing. One of the liveliest and most active persons in the house is a woman who came this season on crutches and in great pain. She tells me that she is not working on "Odo to Mt. Clemens." A man who had the rheumatism knocked out of him a year ago tells of the most famous specialist in rheumatic troubles, a distinguished practitioner of whom I never heard, and whose name I cannot recall. "Why do you come here?" exclaimed the German physician. "The best waters in the world for your trouble are in your own country." Then he told him of Mt. Clemens, of which the American had never heard. He came and was made whole. The story is good, and I think it true. I think it also true that some cases are helped but not cured, and quite likely some receive no benefit whatever.

From what I can gather there is hope here for most rheumatism. Of this I am convinced, that the time to try the efficacy of the baths is at the earliest stage of the trouble, as soon as there is a hint that the torture has opened up business. It is easy to kill rheumatism when it is young. Wheeling is quite well acquainted with Mt. Clemens, and has good reason to think well of the place. I know some good people at home who talk much more enthusiastically than I write about the wondrous works of these waters. They speak from their own experience. I am in the main at second-hand. Board is had here at prices ranging from $4 to $21 a week. There are excellent accommodations for those who are willing to pay for them. Baths are 50 cents each, and 25 cents additional for the attendant, who will show in extra rubbing his gratitude for an extra fee, say something like a dollar a week. Twenty-one baths, one a day, is the number recommended, an arbitrary number, of course, to be modified according to circumstances. It is convenient to be in a hotel with a bath house attached, so that the bath robes shall be the only necessary toilettes in going from the room to the bath. Since the robe reaches to the floor there is no Narragansett suggestion in the costume.

RESTRICTION OF IMMIGRATION.

A Pressing Need at This Stage in the History of This Country.

Cincinnati Tribune.

The newspapers and magazines have so frequently sounded notes of warning about the dangers of immigration that many of the people of this country have grown indifferent to the counsels of caution and have come to regard them as the expressions of professional alarmists. Now that the harm has, in a large measure, been wrought, the American people are beginning tardily to recognize the evils that the "fecund of the earth" have brought among them, and the sentiment in favor of rigid restriction of immigration grows apace. But in the meantime, the poison is at work. The vicious, the ignorant, the depraved, the dangerous imported members of society are with us and are manifesting their presence yearly with more frequency and boldness. Added to the wicked elements gained by immigration we have large numbers of ignorant negroes to cope with. The government is doing its best to educate and uplift the colored race, and its good work will go on. The process will be a slow one, and we hope that it and the equally difficult process of assimilating the foreign element of population will not be a task too severe for the United States. We believe this country will be equal to every emergency which presents itself. When the people once clearly understand that they have a serious duty to perform they are disposed to do it patriotically and well. A sharp watch must be kept on those classes which are likely to furnish criminals, and most effective good will be done by putting them out of the way of temptation. In short keep suspicious characters at work or under lock and key.

TUCKER REPUBLICANS

Hold an Enthusiastic Convention—Instruct Delegates for Dayton for Congress.

Special Correspondence of the Intelligence.

DAVIS, W. VA., August 6.—The Tucker county Republican convention nominated W. H. Dasher for county commissioner and C. U. Adams for county superintendent of free schools. The delegates to the Second congressional district convention were instructed to vote for A. G. Dayton. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we affirm our devotion to the principles of the Republican party, which has redeemed the pledges of the constitution, established liberty and equality, fostered internal industries, preserved the integrity of the nation and upheld its credit at home and abroad, and upon the ruins of internationalism we have established an era of prosperity unparalleled in the annals of history.

Resolved, That we recall with pride the consistent and progressive policy and the honorable fulfillment of its pledges in the past, made so conspicuous by comparison with the vacillation, incompetency and utter disregard of principle manifested by the party now temporarily in power.

Resolved, That in the present disgraceful management of affairs at Washington we recognize the hand of Destiny "whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad."

Resolved, That we are willing to accord to our adversaries all that is justly due them, and therefore endorse the sentiments of the Democratic executive that in view of their past pledges the action of the Democratic senate is infamous, and like candor compels us to sanction the opinion of the Cassius of the Democratic party in the senate, so far as it relates to the executive and his attempts to favor foreign syndicates to the detriment of our own people, and that the opinion of his brethren has our hearty endorsement.

Resolved, That the highest good of the masses of the people should be the first consideration of the government; that the importation of hordes of ignorant and vicious foreigners imbued with the dangerous doctrines of nihilism to supplant and degrade the American laborer is detrimental to the best interests of the whole people, dangerous to our social system, productive of untold evil, and should be summarily checked.

Resolved, That to the honest, industrious citizens of the old world who desire to secure homes with us, become citizens and devote their means and industry to our national development and their love and veneration to the land and the institutions of their adoption, we accord a hearty welcome.

Resolved, That there should be a thorough investigation of labor conditions throughout our country, and such action taken on the part of the government as will best remedy existing evils, and prevent the recurrence of the unhappy contest between labor and capital in the future.

Resolved, That we submit to the people for their candid consideration without comment the action of the Democratic party since it came into power.

Resolved, That in times of great financial distress and danger to the state all good citizens should subordinate party prejudice to patriotism, and unite their efforts for the salvation of their common country, that we therefore extend a cordial welcome to all such without regard to past party affiliations who desire to unite with us to remedy the evils resulting from threatened legislation, give new impetus to the wheels of industry, employment to our idle workmen, food and raiment to their destitute families, and sincerely trust that the Omnipotent hand that controls the destinies of nations may crown with success our united efforts to bring peace and prosperity to our unhappy land.

WEATHER AND CROPS

In West Virginia Summarized for the Week Ending August 6.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA., August 7.—H. W. Richardson, the government weather observer, furnishes the following observations for the week ending August 6.

General summary.—During the fore part of the week the temperature was somewhat in excess, during the past three days deficient. Sunshine was about average. Shower occurred on 2, 3 and 4, but were rather poorly distributed except over southern counties where the rainfall was more even. Crops made only a slight advance, the soil being extremely dry on account of drought; more rain is necessary for corn, gardens and grass. Crops in southern counties, as a rule, are in much the best condition, in other localities the situation is somewhat discouraging.

Cereals and Grasses.—Wheat and oat threshing near completion; yield and quality of both crops generally fair, late sown fall wheat and oats make the best showing. Buckwheat grows nicely. Pastures looking greener but still somewhat short. In northern, western and southern counties the hay crop is generally about the average as to yield, and is secured in good shape; in central counties the crop is below the average as to quantity, but the quality is reasonably good, considering the drought; in eastern counties the yield of hay was exceptionally good and first class in quality.

The recent dry weather enabled farmers all over the state to secure hay in the best possible condition. Some meadows in western counties were very dry after hay was cut and were set on fire by sparks from passing locomotives. Corn was almost beyond hope of recovery but the occasional showers during the week went far towards saving at least half the crop; more rain and improvement is noted in the southern counties where rainfall was heavier and better and better distributed, in other sections of the state, while corn was somewhat revived the relief is thought to be only temporary, as rain is again badly needed, especially on uplands.

Vegetables.—Some early planted potatoes sprouting in the ground, crop light; late varieties will be a fair yield generally, though some will be a failure owing to drought. Cabbage not heading out well, especially late varieties, worms bad. Beans and tomatoes good, but some tomatoes hurt by dry rot. Turnips looking healthy and a larger amount sown than usual. Gardens somewhat light, but doing fairly well.

Fruit.—In some localities apples will be about a half crop, in others a total failure, still dropping from trees. Peaches very scarce. Many fruit trees of all kinds dying.

SATOLLI'S LIQUOR DECREE

What Father Ducey Has to Say About that Pronouncement.

New York Special to Chicago Tribune.

In discussing Mr. Satolli's decree on the saloonkeeping question Father Ducey said to-day: "The scope and meaning of Mr. Satolli's letter to Bishop Watterson has been misunderstood. The decisions embodied in the letter were not to be applied generally, but locally. This view has already been expressed by various archbishops. There can have been no thought in the apostolic delegate's mind of deliberately and absolutely condemning the sale of liquor. It is quite true, as you say, that the Holy Father himself drinks wine, and that both wine and spirits are commonly indulged in by the clergy, more particularly in Rome. To condemn the use of wine in toto, even though it may not be fermented, seems to me to be equivalent to casting a slur upon the most solemn of the sacraments. I cannot say whether Archbishop Ireland had anything to do with the issue of the delegate's letter. He is himself a total abstainer, though with a peculiar weakness for ginger ale. For my part, I can't endure that drink. If I had to stick to ginger ale for two days I would have dyspepsia. I take wine in moderation myself, and if my health requires it a small dose of spirits. After a hard day's work, for instance, I sometimes refresh myself with a little whiskey and water. For convenience sake I occasionally have a bottle of brandy in my house. One bottle lasts me weeks. I am not ashamed to be seen drinking moderately. What I do drink I prefer to drink openly. I don't know whether there are any saloonkeepers or not in my congregation. If there are I only hope they conduct their business decently."

Father Walter Elliott, one of the guiding lights of the Paulist community in this country, grew radiant when he spoke of Mr. Satolli's decision. "The decision," said he, "has only local weight and therefore at the first blush may not seem a great thing. But the tendency it shows—the tendency as the Germans say—is big."

J. B. Smith, of the Wine and Spirit Gazette, referring to the Satolli decree, which he has said places seven-eighths of the liquor dealers of New York between the devil and the deep sea, said to-day:

"This fight was forced upon us. We didn't enter into a crusade against the pope on our own account, but when the decree was issued we saw the drift of the Roman Catholic Church or its sentiment as expressed through the propaganda, and we concluded that it was only a question of time, anyway, before the question would be forced to a point where it must be decisively answered. Even if we had stayed its solution off for the present we knew it would only be for a time and that the day would ultimately come when the thing must be settled. We should most assuredly never have said anything if the apostolic delegates had not issued his decree. Through our board of directors we are in intimate touch with the trade, and I can tell you that the trade's animosity is not directed against Archbishop Corrigan as much as it is against Mr. Satolli. You will find, if you canvass the liquor dealers here, that they will not say a word against Archbishop Corrigan, but they will denounce the Italian apostolic delegate. I have received letters from liquor dealers in this city and all over the country asking: 'Shall we abandon our business and give our competitors a free field just because the apostolic delegate has decided to that effect?' Untill this question arose a great many of them favored Satolli and thought he was a liberal and good man whom they were glad to support. Now they have changed their minds. His decree is un-American in spirit and wholly unjust."

CHINA MUST APOLOGIZE.

France Makes a Demand Because of an Explorer's Death.

TIEN TSIN, CHINA, August 7.—M. Jules Dextril de Rhines, the eminent French explorer, has been murdered at Thibet, and his body thrown into the river. The French envoy to China has addressed a protest to the government, demanding the recovery and return of the unfortunate man's body and papers. The envoy also demands that the Chinese government make an apology and provide a proper compensation for the family of the murdered man.
